Hex 3503

This hex consists entirely of Chákan forests, except for a clearing deep within it where the Ancient Temple of Vimúhla stands. This temple dates back to the time of the Dragon Riders. It is possible that this temple may be a nexus to another plane, as strange happenings have been known to occur when the moon sacred to Vimúhla, Káshi, passes directly overhead.

A trail leads from Penu'ím Harbor to the Temple, and continues east towards Butrús. Another trail leads south towards Páchi Léi territory, yet another trail leads north to connect to the Sákbe road from Tumíssa.

Hex 3504

More uncharted forest. This area is on the more heavily eroded eastern slopes of the Pán Cháka plateau, creating more of a “classical” karst terrain. Two natural features of note are Lake Tlu'úmi and the Cave of Zhú-Tsái.

Lake Tlu'úmi is a deep sinkhole filled with a bottomless? lake. No-one has ever descended the rotten limestone walls of the sinkhole to reach the surface of the dark, chill lake. The lake surface is at least 200 dháiba (875 feet) below the surface of the plateau.

The Cave of Zhú-Tsái lies at the bottom of a limestone scarp, a small stream exits the cave and flows to the southeast before curving to the southwest, eventually draining into Penu'ím Bay.
