Issue Five | Summer 1995

Mayhem Mansion

A short adventure for the Sharu'una fief campaign wherein acquaintances are renewed, friendships begun and enemies come by. It is suitable for a small group of low-level characters, ideally generated using the Sharu'una character generation rules in the accompanying article. Obviously, it would be advantageous if as many players as possible were members of the Round Rock clan. The scenario won't take long to play, and should be viewed as an introduction to the fief.

Background The wealthy Bauyene lineage of the Blue Shadow Clan have decided to re-open a summer mansion that they maintain in the hills near Vu'u. The mansion has not been used for about 50 years and is thought to be in some disrepair. The Blue Water Clan were contracted to inspect and renovate the property but for some reason they have declined to accept the contract. In fact, they did send two separate teams of workers to the property but neither stayed more than a single night. Now, the Bauyene have offered the contract to the Round Rock clan who will gain substantially both in terms of money and status if they are able to undertake the renovation. However, first they must find someone who is willing to spend a night in the place...

Senior member of the Bauyene lineage and "client" for the renovation

Jummar

Dramatis Personae

hiBauyene
Angredai hiBasrimkoi	Lineage head of the Basrimkoi lineage of the Round Rock Clan. It is Angredai who hopes to fulfil the contract on behalf of his clan.
Yeluteng hiKadobar	Lineage head of the Kadobar lineage of the Blue Water Clan. It is Yeluteng who has lost the contract.
Larnesh hiKadobar	A young carpenter who fled the mansion after one night. He is often to be found in low-classwinemakers' clanhouses.
Harish hiQoprosh	An itinerant vendor of chumetl and other beverages. Harish has big ears and can be counted on for information
Sredu hiBasrimkoi	A builder from the Round Rock Clan. He is brave enough to accompany anyone to visit the mansion
Zugratsu	A very minor Kilalammuyani chieftain
Plus various builder	rs, citizens, slaves, thugs and tribesman.
Trus various bunder	s, citzens, siaves, thags and tribesman.

to be paid:

Angredai's Mission

Clanless Persons: 1K/day + food + "a good word" Very Low Clan: 1.5 K/day + food + shamtla if killed Low Clan & above 2 K/day + food + shamtla if killed

Angredai will authorise a member of his clan (a player who will nominally be in charge of the party) to recruit some muscle -clanless warriors and others who will work for a small sum. He authorises the following rates

He will issue the following caution: "Remember who owns this mansion and its contents. We're trying to set an example here, so I wouldn't like anything, anything at all, give it to (player in charge) and I'll make sure it is returned to its rightful wine, they can get the following story.

If successful, all will receive a 10K success bonus.

owners." The search for the necessary characters might be a good way for the players to get to know each other.

anything to happen that might prejudice our chances of getting further work from this clan. If you find

The players will have heard that there have been strange goings on at the mansion. They may wish to find out more, and a journey to the market will introduce them to Harish hiQoprosh who can be a useful source of information for a hlash or two. He mentions that a young carpenter, Larnesh, was part of one of the previous work parties at the mansion and tells the players where to find him. In exchange for a few goblets of cheap

Larnesh's Story

began to inspect the roof with my brother Detleng while my uncles Vantas, Orubo and Hlaji inspected the inside. We stopped after about 3 hours because there was a rainstorm coming and the light had faded. Detleng and myself unpacked the stove and started to prepare the evening meal. Thinking about it, I suppose I noticed something odd even then. There were some odd noises coming from the cellars. I put it down to rats at the time, and wasn't really worried. Over the meal, Vantas started saying that we weren't the first people here, and that some cousins from the lakeside

We arrived at the mansion in the early afternoon and right away we could see the building was in pretty poor shape. I clanhouse had come here two weeks previously. Orubo wanted to know why they hadn't finished the job but all Vantas would say was that "Qorum and his mob are all scared of their own shadows." Anyway, at that point we all heard a noise from down below, like a pot or something breaking. We all went very quiet because noone knew what to do. Finally Orubo picked up a big ember from the fire and said "Well, I suppose I'll have to go and see what that was". We all followed him down into the cellar but apart from the smashed pot there was nothing. I said "Did you bring that pot with you, Orubo?". Orubo didn't say nothing because he hadn't, and everyone else was shaking their heads too. We all turned about face to go up the steps again when we heard a noise from under the cellar, and I looked back to see something like glowing fingers of mist, barely visible, swirling around the floor. I screamed, and we ran up those stairs like I don't know what!. We grabbed our belongings and headed straight for Vu'u right through the night and the rain and everything.

legal dispute over the inheritance of the mansion was settled only recently.

The Mansion

complete them?

small coins.

Anyway, you won't catch me going back there!

(The following information is available to anyone with the necessary skills to research it) The Bauyene mansion is several hundred years old and was built on the site of an earlier mansion. It was originally owned by the Tumkun lineage whose last member, Eruval hiTumkun, died about 60 years ago. A Eruval hi Tumkun was well known as a traveller, scholar and collector.

some bracelets. The bracelets are gold inlaid with copper and tiger's eye. (They may be worth 250 kaitars to someone who disobeys Angredai's strict orders) The scrolls are historical documents in Engsvanyali and Classical Tsolyáni. The papers are rough research notes in a crabbed, modern hand. It seems that these form part of Eruval's private collection which, for one reason or another, he kept in a very safe place. The research notes deal with Opening the sarcophagus will reveal a mummified corpse. Burning the corpse will stop the strange hauntings, Eruval's unsuccessful attempts to locate the lost palace of Ssirandar XIV—perhaps a player will be able to decorated with an elaborate Ksarulian motif, a set of scrolls and a pile of loose papers, weighted down by but taking it to the Temple of Ksarul or Thúmis in Hekellu will bring a 50 kaitar reward. (Don't explain why to the players—its nice to have a possible scenario link kept in reserve!) The Ambush On emerging from the mansion, the players will find that a group of Kilalammuyani bandits, headed by Zugratsu, have enterd the mansion. They will, of course, attempt to rob the players but won't actually harm them except in self defence. If defeated the bandits will be found to be carrying 12 Kaitars between them in he is taken alive, Zugratsu will beg for clemency. If he is granted this, he will be forever in the debt of the ayers and their true friend—perhaps someone who can dig them out of a tight spot in another adventure true.

Mrur #1	16	Sword	0	10 [3/4/6]	6	2	14
Mrur #2	16	Sword	0	10 [3/4/6]	6	2	14
Zugratsu	19	Sword	+1	15 [4/6/8]	11	4	8
Bandit #1	22	Sword	+2	20 [5/8/11]	8	2	6
Bandit #2	16	Spear	0	14 [3/5/8]	10	2	6
Bandit #3	18	Sword	+1	12 [3/5/7]	12	2	6
Bandit #4	16	Spear	0	12 [3/5/7]	9	2	6
Bandit #5	14	Sword	0	12 [3/5/7]	11	o	6
Bandit #6	14	Spear	0	14 [3/5/8]	8	0	6		